HISTORY OF ELK IN PA

There was a time when elk roamed freely throughout their native Pennsylvania range. But with increased settlement came loss of habitat, and by the mid 1800's unregulated hunting had wiped out the state's native elk herd. Reintroduction of these magnificent animals began in 1913, when the Pennsylvania Game Commission imported 177 Rocky Mountain elk into Pennsylvania. Today, more than 1,400 elk live here and are the largest herd in the northeastern United States.

Over the past two decades, the Pennsylvania Game Commission, the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, the Keystone Elk Country Alliance and other organizations have worked to conserve and protect elk and their habitat. Through improvements in the elk range and other efforts, it is hoped this wonderful animal will continue to roam the Pennsylvania wilderness.

To begin your elk-viewing experience, stop in at our luxurious hotels, motels or B&Bs right off Interstate 80 here in Clearfield (exit 120) so that you can drop off your luggage and get ready for a great adventure.
